

BRIEF MESSAGE FROM MISSING GIRL.

Letter Received by Mother of Florence Leonhardt, Who Disappeared Friday.

NO CLEW TO WHEREABOUTS.

Child Says She Is Safe but Will Not Live With Her Father.

A letter was received yesterday from Florence Leonhardt, the 15-year-old daughter of August F. Leonhardt, who disappeared last Friday after she had been given into the custody of the father by an order of Circuit Judge Filmer.

The missive was addressed to the girl's mother, Mrs. H. L. Dausman, of No. 447 Franklin avenue. In it the girl said that she had determined not to return to her father. She would rather die than live with him, she declared. The letter was postmarked in St. Louis, but offered no other clue to the whereabouts of the missing child. The mother, however, declares that she is overjoyed to learn that the little girl has not carried out her threat to kill herself. Mrs. Dausman has been suffering from nervous prostration ever since the disappearance of the child.

Developments yesterday seemed to show that the little girl had planned from the first that she would run away from her father at the first opportunity.

When Judge Filmer issued an order giving Mr. Leonhardt possession of the little girl last Friday she went with her father quietly, although before the order was issued she wept bitterly at the prospect of being taken away from her mother.

Mr. Leonhardt said yesterday that he was surprised to see his daughter apparently willing to go home with him from the courtroom last Friday.

"We got home last Friday about 1 o'clock," said Mr. Leonhardt, "and I thought that my daughter would soon be contented with me. In the afternoon I sent my son Edwin to the dentist on Jefferson avenue to have some work done. Florence asked me to let her accompany her brother and I consented."

"When they reached the dentist's office she told her brother to go in alone, while she went to get some paper to write a letter. Edwin told his sister that she could write the letter in the office, but she refused to go in with him. When he was ready to go home his sister had not returned, and he could not find her around the neighborhood, so he notified me by telephone, and later came down and told me all about his sister's disappearance."

"I immediately notified all the little girl's relatives and asked them to let me know if she went to them. Some of them assisted me in searching for her, but the search was fruitless. I then asked the police to help me find the child, but they refused to assist me at the time, because I did not have papers to show that the child had been given into my care. They are helping me now, however, and the city will be thoroughly searched for her."

"When I took the little girl home she seemed to be contented to stay, so I did not think it necessary to keep a watch on her. I now believe that she had firmly resolved, while in the courtroom, to run away from me the first time she got a chance."

"Monday morning John Kunz, a teamster for an East St. Louis express company, called to see me and told me that he had seen a girl that he thought was my missing daughter, wandering about the yards near the Relay Depot in East St. Louis. He described her, but the description did not tally with that of my daughter. I told him that I thought that he was mistaken."

"When my daughter disappeared," continued Mr. Leonhardt, "she wore a green plaid dress and a green coat. She had a white waist, and a brown straw hat, trimmed with brown ribbons and flowers. She has large blue eyes, light brown hair and is rather large for her age, which is 15 years and 3 months. She is about four feet eight inches tall. Five of her front teeth are filled with gold."

The mother of the child, who is now Mrs. H. L. Dausman, was divorced from Mr. Leonhardt some time ago and married to Doctor Dausman shortly after the divorce was granted. Florence went to live with her mother, with whom she remained until last Friday, when she was given over to her father in accordance with the order issued by Judge Filmer.

Mrs. Dausman said yesterday that she had no idea where the child was, and that she thought that she was hiding so her father could not find her.

"She wanted to stay with me," said Mrs. Dausman, "and she often said that she would kill herself rather than live with her father. Before I heard from her I was afraid that she had carried out her threat. Since the child left her father to stay with me she has not gone to school because she was afraid to appear on the streets. Whenever there was a ring at the bell she would hide in the cellar. Ever since my divorce from Mr. Leonhardt the child has been so nervous that I do not believe she would have accomplished her end if I had insisted on her going. My husband and I had about made up our minds to send her to Mary Institute, but now that she is in her father's charge, these plans will not be carried out."

Mr. Leonhardt said that he had often heard his daughter say that she would kill herself rather than live with her mother, but he thought that she had been influenced against him and hoped to win her affection in time.

WIFE'S PLEA TO HER HUSBAND. CANDIDATES WERE VERY COY.

Mrs. Clarke Implored Him to Return—After Tears on Both Sides, the Trial at Pittsburg Went On.

REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.

Pittsburg, April 24.—With tears streaming down her face, a woman at the hearing of a divorce suit, read a letter written by her to her husband, imploring him to come back to her. Ester Bartlett Clarke, the former Washington society belle, sat in the witness box of Common Pleas Court today.

She implored her husband's attorney, J. L. Goehring, not to read parts of the letter aloud, and when he refused, she appealed to Colonel S. A. Worthington to help her, but he was powerless. Her paroxysm of grief and recollections awakened by the letter caused her husband to bury his face in his hands and weep with her.

The sons of both were perfectly audible in all parts of the courtroom. Attorney Goehring had to pause in order to allow Mrs. Clarke to recover her composure. Mrs. Clarke tried to assume her defiant attitude, but it was a weak attempt and she was left crying when she left the stand.

Mrs. Clarke ended with her father, Colonel J. D. Bartlett. She had undergone a change since she first appeared in the now famous divorce case. The change does not detract from her attractiveness, but it indicates a wearing away of her marvelous physical resources. No trace of timidity or lack of resolution can be discerned in the face of her face, but she is much more pallid and noticeably weaker. She is scarcely taken her seat when the draw from her chaise longue a little of lavender soap, as she strode for comfort, showed a lack of spontaneity and it failed quickly.

Mrs. Mattie Lambert Ran Down Three Flights of Stairs With Clothes Ablaze.

HER INJURIES ARE TERRIBLE. ALL DEPENDS ON THE COLOR.

Harrowing Spectacle Presented on Olive, West of Beaumont Street—Baby Rescued by a Boy.

With her garments in flames from a burning gasoline-soaked coat which she had thrown from the window, Mrs. Mattie Lambert, of No. 278 Olive street, rushed down three flights of stairs and finally fell prostrate upon the car tracks in front of the house at 6:30 o'clock last evening.

Spectators quickly extinguished the flames and the woman was sent to the City Hospital. Doctor Nicot thought that she would hardly live until morning. She is burned on the face, body and legs, and is a fearful sight. She is only 26 years old, and is the wife of William Lambert, who tried in vain to save her. They have a little girl, a month old, named Carmen.

Lambert had just returned home from work, and Mrs. Lambert was in her room on the third floor of the house, preparing to cook supper. Her husband cleaned a coat with gasoline, which he had in a basin. After he had finished, he hung the coat up to dry, near Mrs. Lambert, who was busy at the time. She was in a blaze, and saw her child playing near by and grabbed the coat to throw it from the window.

When she did so the flames enveloped her, lighting her garments. She cut the string of her coat from the window, and rushed screaming down the stairs. Her husband after her, yelling, "Stop." Water was thrown on her, but she was too badly hurt. Her dress dropped from her by her cries. Her dress dropped from her by her cries. Her dress dropped from her by her cries.

The fragments of the dress were scattered all over the floor of the stairs. As she passed through the gate in front of the house, the fragments of her dress caught on the iron railing and was torn off like tissue paper. When she reached the bottom of the stairs, she was lying on her back, and her head was resting on the ground. Her head and neck were wrapped in a blanket, and she was lying on her back, and her head was resting on the ground.

NOTE IN FLOATING BOTTLE.

Points to Suicide—May Be Clew to Missing Girl.

R. H. Brown, assistant engineer on the United States steamer John N. Macomb, recovered the following note from a bottle which was floating in the river yesterday at the foot of Meramec street.

"One more unfortunate, I have resolved to end my life in one of the ways mentioned in the paper. Any one finding this note, please let me know by mail, or by word of mouth, and I will be glad to reward you with a sum of money."

The note was written on the margin of a page of The Republic of the issue of April 14, in a firm and legible feminine hand.

Mr. Brown said that he was standing near the shore of the river yesterday, and noticed the bottle floating by. He took it up and opened it, and found the note. He took the note and extracted the note.

"I had read in The Republic a few days before, a story of a girl who had disappeared. I thought it was a very interesting story, and I thought I would try to find out what had happened to her."

WHY WE MAKE SO MANY CURES

BY THE GREAT ELECTRO-MEDICAL SPECIALIST,

B. F. TOLSON, M. D., Ph. C., LL. D., of the State Electro-Medical Institute.

"In the cure of certain chronic diseases there can be no comparison between the success of the electro-medical specialist and that of the Electro-Medical Specialist of the Institute. The difference is this: The Electro-Medical Specialist has the powerful curative powers of both medical and electrical treatment, while the medical specialist can only use the medical part. It is a well-known fact that the medical specialist can cure only a certain percentage of cases, while the electro-medical specialist can cure almost all cases. The difference is this: The Electro-Medical Specialist has the powerful curative powers of both medical and electrical treatment, while the medical specialist can only use the medical part. It is a well-known fact that the medical specialist can cure only a certain percentage of cases, while the electro-medical specialist can cure almost all cases.

Many thousands have been cured by the truth of the above plausible statement. Who has tried the medical specialist without success? It is the twentieth century treatment. There are two fundamental facts that make up the human body: namely, the nervous system and the muscular system, each of which is susceptible to various diseases. Diseases of the muscular system can be cured by electrical treatment, while diseases of the nervous system can be cured by medical treatment. Annual Session of the National Association at Boston.

Boston, Mass., April 24.—The annual convention of the National Manufacturers Association met here today.

The Committee on Patents has recommended the adoption of a resolution adopted by the Association at its meeting in Philadelphia last December, to the effect that the association favors the enactment of a law by Congress providing for the establishment of a patents court in the United States similar to the law now in force in England and Germany, and also the negotiation of the patents post treaties with other nations.
